Staying at Douai Abbey

Douai Abbey is a Benedictine monastery, and has been welcoming guests as a long tradition. The buildings are an eclectic mix of old and new, and are situated amongst lovely peaceful grounds.

The accommodation is simple, clean, comfortable and quiet – perfect to ensure a good night's sleep after a full day of Emmett training. Each room has a hand basin and shower or bath with shared toilet facilities very close by, while some have full en-suite facilities. Guests have access to a common room and library and are welcome to bring their own wine etc into the establishment (as the Abbey doesn't have a liquor licence). This is a place of peace, and as such there are no televisions or phones in the rooms – which can often be welcomed as a nice change for a few days. A guest computer is available to access emails. Wifi is available in the conference room where the workshop is held.

Eating main meals is in the guest refectory, and special dietary requirements can be accommodated – give this information to Father Finbar when booking your accommodation. Special dietary requests must be made at least 2 weeks in advance of the course.

Guests can come and go from the Abbey as they please, so you are welcome to go out for dinner at local restaurants and pubs for a change of scenery (just simply let Fr Finbar know in advance so food isn't wasted). The driveway gates are closed at 8pm.

Other Things To Know...

£65 per night (bed and all food). Payment can be made with credit card and is paid upon leaving the Abbey. For those with financial concerns, you can negotiate a lower rate.

Breakfast is continental. Lunch is the largest meal of the day, comprising of 2 courses – main and pudding. Dinner is a light affair. The food is delicious.

Those not staying at the Abbey can join in the 2 course lunch for £11 per day, but you are welcome to BYO lunch too!

There is no obligation to stay at the Abbey.
